

7 Quick Takes Friday: The Olympics, the case of the vanishing cheese balls, egg hunts in August, a backpack search, and other shopping fun

I've already written about my least favorite Olympic moment of the week. My favorite—and likely Baltimore's favorite—moment: when Michael Phelps went from near tears to laughter while the national anthem played, all because some Baltimorean friends yelled out "Oh!" during the anthem. That's what we do in Charm City to honor our Orioles.Embed