

7 Quick Takes Friday: What features you'd want in your dream car, homemade pierogis, gearing up for Chinese New Year, and raising a Godly man

When we went car shopping last week, my father convinced us to leave our sons at home with him. Thank goodness we did. First of all, John and I are boring. We barely cared about the color of the car, never mind whether it could go underwater or carry as many people