

Mercy, mercy me

The bedraggled guy walks the center of MLK Boulevard, approaching my car. "Anything helps," his sign says.

Orioles pitcher Tommy Hunter successfully closes on his Catholic faith

At 28 years old (as of July 3), Baltimore Orioles pitcher Tommy Hunter fits the bill for goofy, playful and comedic.

St. Pius X youth among those honored at Eagle of the Cross ceremony

It wasn't until Mariellen Kemp attended a public high school that she recognized how important her Catholic faith was to her

Catholic Review earns more than two dozen journalism and advertising awards

The Catholic Review has been recognized by regional, national and international journalism organizations for excellence in 2013.

A staycation, surprise wedding invitation, board games, renting Legos, and a magnificent gift (7 Quick Takes Friday)

—1—I'm taking a week off of work to enjoy some time at home with Leo and Daniel. We'll probably go on some day trips and do some local exploring, but mainly I want to sit on the deck and read while they play in the yard. I want to grocery shop

Anchor institutions including

Baltimore's Catholic colleges sign city plan focusing on four initiatives

Leaders from Bon Secours Hospital, Loyola University Maryland and Notre Dame of Maryland University joined Baltimore Mayor Stephanie Rawlings-Blake and leaders representing Baltimore's education and medical institutions to sign the Baltimore City Anchor Plan June 25.

Why watch the World Cup in a crowd?

What struck me about the June 22 ESPN telecast of U.S.-Portugal in the World Cup was not its status as the most-watched soccer match in the history of American television, but that so many chose to take in the drama on a big screen in a public space, whether it

Sister Dorothy Epple, O.S.F., dies

A funeral Mass for Sister of St. Francis of Philadelphia Dorothy Epple will be offered June 30 at Assisi House in Aston, Pa.

‘We had to do something’: Westminster parish launches 12- step program after parishioner overdoses

Mondays at 6:30 p.m., Monsignor James P. Farmer can be found at St. John Catholic Church’s parish center, welcoming addicts.

Archdiocese of Baltimore announces new directors

A new executive director of the Department of Evangelization and other new positions have been announced by the archdiocese.

Coming home through great silence

Father Patrick Peach returns to visit St. John in Westminster.

Five takeaways from the Fortnight for Freedom's opening Mass

More than 1,000 people packed the Basilica for the launch of the Fortnight. Check out five takeaways from the event.