

Get tweeted updates on today's big vote on same-sex marriage

Today, the Maryland House of Delegates has its final debate on a bill legalizing same-sex marriage. If the delegates vote in favor of the measure, the bill will become law since it has already cleared the Senate and Gov. Martin J. O'Malley has promised to sign it.

Supporters of traditional marriage plan to have a major presence in Annapolis while the delegates do their work. A peaceful prayer vigil is planned at the State House beginning at 10 a.m. (See story here).

I will be in Annapolis all day covering this critical issue. I'm going to do some live tweeting as events unfold. You can follow me at www.twitter.com/catholicreview.