

I'm missing my Madrid kids

It's been two days since I've returned to my life in Baltimore. The days of World Youth Day in Madrid seem like a year ago now as I get back to the daily grind of work, but I just thought I'd let all the kids know I'm missing following them and sharing their stories with the world. I've still got stuff to put together from Madrid and Avila, including pictures and videos. But, before I go out on an assignment this morning for The Catholic Review, I thought I'd share the last group high five from Aug. 23 after a group prayer service in the city.