

Mini golf is a big hit, how movies need adoption ratings, when did play dough become a flavor, rewards for Mass behavior, and crabs (7 Quick Takes Friday)

When we took the boys to play miniature golf for the first time last week, John started with a scorecard in his hand. Before we reached the second hole, it had disappeared into his pocket. I never saw it again. Overall, though, the golfing went better than I had expected.