

The great snowball flavor debate

By Catholic Review Staff

Snowballs are a much-loved tradition in Maryland. But, the debate remains, what flavors are best? Here's what some folks from around the Archdiocese of Baltimore had to say about their favorite flavors.

Spearmint (marshmallow optional)

Sean Caine, director of communications for the Archdiocese of Baltimore

Coconut

Jodi Phelan, director of development for Our Lady of Perpetual Help School in Ellicott City

Vanilla (Root beer, a close second)

Father J. Collin Poston, pastor of St. Mary in Hagerstown

Not a snowball eater, but if she were, she would like a coke flavor

School Sister of Notre Dame Hilda "Hildie" Marie Sutherland, 82, of the Institute of Notre Dame

The Cannon children, parishioners of the Catholic Community of St. Francis Xavier in Hunt Valley had this to say:

Sour lemon

Loyola Blakefield, Towson, student Sean Cannon, 13

Egg custard

Notre Dame Preparatory School, Towson, student Kate Cannon, 11

Sour cherry

Notre Dame Preparatory School student Kerry Cannon, 11

Also see:

Leap of faith: St. Clare dance camp nurtures body and soul

'A walk down memory lane' : Archdiocese of Baltimore bids farewell to Bishop Rozanski

Who responds to hundreds of prayer requests?