

VIDEO REPORT: Stephen Colbert's Chaplain

Be sure to tune into Comedy Central tonight to watch Jesuit Father James Martin make another of his hilarious appearances on the "Colbert Report." Father Martin, culture editor of America Magazine, has become known as the "chaplain" to the Colbert Report. His appearances on the popular program are always a lot of fun. Tonight's topic is God's "approval ratings."

During a Baltimore talk on faith and humor at the end of July, Father Martin took some questions from the audience. As almost always happens, the first one was about what it's like to appear with Stephen Colbert on national television. Father Martin described how he was first invited onto the program. He outlined how his appearances on the popular show might be considered a form of evangelization. He also noted that Mr. Colbert is "very Catholic" - to the point of even wearing a scapular.
