

Watch: High school students say their generation can end abortion

By Matt Palmer
mpalmer@CatholicReview.org

Many thousands of Baltimore teens were in Washington Jan. 25 for the March for Life, which marks the anniversary of the Roe v. Wade Supreme Court decision to legalize abortion.

Young people from parishes, high schools and home schools all went to Washington to lend their voice of support against abortion.

John Carroll School students say that just because abortion is legal doesn't make it right.

Baltimore's home school teenagers say protecting the unborn is a priority.